

Claims Taking in Future Adjudications

Western States Adjudication Conference

San Antonio, Texas

October 19, 2005

Presented by

Carter Fritschle

Water Rights Supervisor

Idaho Department of Water Resources

Goals

- Shift more responsibilities to the claimant
- Enable claim filing via the internet
- Enable onscreen maps for locating Points of Diversion
- Enable onscreen maps with taxlot coverage for describing the Places of Use
- Allow graphics (shapefiles) to generate Public Land Survey legal descriptions

Current Application

- Claim forms may be hand written or computer generated, but IDWR personnel must do all of the data entry
- (Exception: the data for some claims from the federal agencies have been bulk loaded)

Current Application

- Instructions for completing the elements of the claim are in a separate instruction booklet

Future Application

- Claimant initiates the generating of a claim on the internet
- The instructions for completing the elements of the claim are available by clicking the help button on each screen, and by interactive pop-up boxes

Future Application

- Claimant is asked if the claim is based on an existing water right recorded with IDWR
- If the claim is based on a recorded water right, all of the data from the recorded water right is copied to the claim, and the claimant may modify the data as required
- If the claim is not based on a recorded water right, the claimant is directed to enter a Priority Date for the claim

Future Application

- When the claimant clicks the “Continue” button after entering the existing water number or the Priority Date, a Point of Diversion ID is generated for this transaction.
- Clicking the “Continue” button saves the information on each page on an IDWR server
